

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

Revival of Activity in Stocks.

A BUOYANT MARKET.

Further Addition to the List of Stocks.

WALL STREET, Dec. 29—6 P. M.

The stock market today was invariably strong and in most instances higher. Whether money is to be cheaper or dearer in the immediate future seems to be the question which at the moment is holding the whipsaw easy speculation. Were money readily available, easy money would be the rule. Stocks would advance, but as many bodies think that ease in money is to be the exception stocks, comparatively speaking, drag. There was, nevertheless, a noticeable working up in today's values, the motive power being afforded by the government disbursements. It is hardly possible that $17,500,000 to $18,000,000 can be debauched upon the money market without reducing rates for cash accommodation for a time, at least, and the majority of operators so regard it. At any rate, upon this possible, it must be confessed, somewhat problematical belief, they were ready buyers of stocks today. Whether for a long pull or a short one they do not probably know themselves. The prospective ease in money for a day or two to come is an inducement to buy for the quick turn. It is a case where the "what-if" hand," represented by small and comparatively unimportant money, is in the bush," presented before the future is uncertain. There was a steady but moderate gain in the general list of prices. Among the most conspicuous stocks to advance was Reading, which rose here, first on the strength of London quotations and second on purchases in our own market. As well as can be learned the demand for stock is based upon some projected alliance with the Atlantic and Great Western road, by which a new through line will be opened to the West. On the London market the different securities of the Atlantic and Great Western road have advanced materially, probably for the reason given above. One of those meteoric upward blazes, which, at long intervals, are recorded in Wall street history, was seen today in the extraordinary advance in the Edison Electric Light stock. Selling a month or two back at $100 or $300 per share, the price reached $4,000 a share today, at which rate sales were made, and there was no offer at the close under $5,000 per share. The closing prices of the stock market proper were nearly the best of the day. Total sales at the Board were 300,954 shares, against 154,071 on Saturday. Following is an epitome of the day's transactions—
